Make the web work for you

This online program provides an introduction to concepts, tools and networks to help educators and library professionals thrive in a digital world.

Supported by our team of trainers, participants define and undertake a small research task and learn through doing as they develop their understanding of digital literacy, information skills and networked learning. The course features regular web conferences, and a wealth of trusted resources to explore.

This six-unit, self-paced program covers:
- Advanced searching and information evaluation skills
- Social media for professional learning
- Web tools to help find, manage, store and share information
- Digital publishing
- Online collaboration and networking.

The program is designed for those new to the world of web-based learning, looking to improve their research and digital literacy skills.

The course begins on 20 April 2015 and runs for 6 weeks.
